EXPLANATORY.

The letters of alphabet shown by right-hand cuttings have the same meaning as in an ordinary index. The lettering shown by left-hand cuttings stands for the first letters of surnames, or first part of corporate names. As will be seen from above cut the letter B is divided according to the first two or three letters of same; each page is lettered to correspond with the names to go thereon. The capital letter B stands for the first letter, the following for the second, and the letters below for the third letters.

The letters occurring at different intervals on the page stand for the first letters of the given name-or first letter of second part of firm or corporate name, having no given name.

A few examples will illustrate this. Take the first name on page shown by above cut, Albert Buyer, the lettering, containing the three letters corresponding to Buy in Buyer, that name belongs on that page. It is Bu stu written in the subdivision marked  $\begin{pmatrix} A & B \\ C & D \end{pmatrix}$  the A in which corresponds with A in Albert. vwx

On the same page, and in the same subdivision, are also indexed such names as Bushannan & Co., y z By the C in the subdivision  $\begin{array}{c} A & B \\ C & D \end{array}$  standing for Co.; also Byrnes, Dugan, & Hudson, the D in the same Bz subdivision standing for Dugan.

Facility of reference may be increased by writing firm and corporate names from bottom and individual names from top of subdivision as above.

The blanks under the heading "Extended Under" below the subdivision letters are seldom used. They are intended for use when a subdivision is filled, which rarely happens. They also make it possible to fill every line on the page without disturbing the ease of reference. In extending subdivisions the following directions are observed : Write name on same page in any subdivision having available space. But write in the narrow column to the left of said names, the number of the subdivision to which the same belong ; and in one of the spaces under the head "Extended Under" write the number of the subdivision to which the names are carried. This permits such names to be readily found. For we of extension see. Indue sherm
